	Statements
	Even if the Irish backstop was removed from the current proposed Withdrawal Agreement, it still would not represent what Leave voters voted for in 2016	It is better for the UK to leave the EU with no deal than for the UK to accept a bad deal from the EU	The best chance Brexit has of happening is for the Conservative Party and The Brexit Party to form a pact where each respective party will stand aside in favour ...	It would be unacceptable for Boris Johnson to take a deal back to Parliament that was very similar to the deal that Theresa May negotiated with the EU	MPs would be betraying what Leave voters wanted in the referendum in 2016 if they support a deal that is similar to the deal Theresa May negotiated with the EU	Boris Johnson is likely to agree any deal with the EU rather than one that is necessarily best for the UK
